

URBAN PLANNER

Can You Imagine Cities of the Future?

Urban planners look for ways to make cities good places to live, work, and play. Their job is to figure out the best way to use land and space in their cities. They work to create good solutions for housing, recreation, transportation, and communication. Some specialize in transportation, economic development, housing, or the environment. The goal for all is to create places that are both people and planet-friendly. Urban planners must earn a master's degree to qualify for most jobs. They work for government agencies and big real estate development companies.
